In a press release sent out this morning, The CW revealed that it would be holding a "Super Hero Flash" panel at the network's Upfront presentation this afternoon, with CW president Mark Pedowitz expected to field questions about the DC's movie universe and plans for television's future. The event will be live-streamed on The CW's YouTube channel, and will run through some of the questions that will be asked by attendees. You can find out more information over on the TV Guide website. First announced last week at the Television Critics Association's summer press tour, The CW's Flash panel was billed as a "special edition" of its Upfront presentation, and was to feature DC Entertainment executive Greg Berlanti and cast members Grant Gustin, Danielle Panabaker and Carlos Valdes. While many were excited to hear about the status of the new series, which is currently shooting in Vancouver, the Arrow and Flash spin-off will not be on the show floor at the network's Upfront panel. By all accounts, it was a solid panel, with the cast offering some details on Flashpoint, the character's apparent appearance in the upcoming Batman-Superman movie and the upcoming Crisis on Infinite Earths story line, as well as a little tease of how they're preparing to introduce Barry Allen's return in the second season of the series. The panel will also be live-streamed, so check back with ComicBook.com for more information. In the last few months, a number of pro-life advocates have entered the political fray. In June, Matt Bevin, a popular Republican U.S. Senate candidate in Kentucky, signed the Born-Alive Abortion Survivors Protection Act, a bill which would have required doctors to provide medical care and treatment to babies who survive abortions. In August, newly elected Republican Governor of Alabama, Kay Ivey, signed the Sanctity of Human Life Ordinance, which forbids any Alabama

Fans of the show are excited about getting to see the show again, even if it is only for a few days. Fans are not the only ones excited, Tim Matheson from TV Fanatic made a post about the new season that many other fans agreed with. Netflix has officially revealed the titles for the second season of Stranger Things. While fans are still waiting for the trailers to drop, Netflix has confirmed what the first episode titles will be. Fans will have to wait a little bit longer to see the trailer, but at least they know when the new season will drop. The new season of Stranger Things was originally supposed to be a new season of Black Mirror. Fans will get to see the show again in a year that seems too short. Luckily for us, that was all lies from Netflix and the new season will be on July 4th. It is not clear if we will be getting more episodes or just the first. Fans of the show will probably watch the first episode to see what happens, then get excited and watch all the other episodes. The show will be releasing on Netflix on July 4th 2d92ce491b
