Mumbai: Amidst the coronavirus lockdown in Maharashtra, the residents of the city have been staring at the computer and phone screens for the past few weeks waiting for the government to approve the extension of the Muharram-i-Qumulatib (MQ) and Charahar-i-Sharjeelatib (CS) and hence the Eid-ul-Fitr. In an exclusive report, the Jaan Nijaar suggests that the government has finally approved the extension of the aforementioned festivals in Maharashtra. “This is a much-awaited development which will come as a relief to lakhs of devout Muslims of the state. The state government has also informed the Supreme Court that the lockdown will be extended for Eid as well. Hence, now you can return to all places of worship of your choice with full freedom and no restrictions,” noted Shaikh Mohammat-ul-Quran, a religious scholar and visiting professor of Islamic studies at Mumbai

University. “Besides, Eid-ul-Fitr and Eid-ul-Adha will also be observed under the supervision of the community. The state government has informed the Supreme Court that all the places of worship are being disinfected.” The apex court had earlier directed the state government to hold the ceremonies in a safe manner, and ensure that no non-essential services are conducted during the period. While the state government has begun the process of organising the first phase of the hartal in Mumbai and Thane, a team of religious scholars is already in the state of Rajasthan to facilitate the five-day process of organising the activities of Eid. In fact, the state government had also informed the apex court that they are going to constitute a judicial panel of five-judges which will supervise all the activities. “We will have a committee of five judges who will supervise the activities of Eid and the process of organising the events. The state has also
