Q: Why is the VBE's "Drawing Tools" section bigger than the screen? I'm creating a VBA UserForm to edit my Power Point slides. I created a region for the VBE and created an instance of the application on the region. Now I'm trying to use the "Drawing Tools" buttons in the VBE like these examples: For some reason, the Drawing Tools section is bigger than the actual screen in which it's placed. I can't seem to resize it. I also tried using the record macro feature in the VBE, but the same thing happens.

A: Use the Object properties: `Dim oReg As Object Set oReg = Application.VBE.ActiveVBProject.VBComponents.Item("VBAProject") Set oReg = oReg.VBComponents.Item("MyUserForm")` `Object.Size = oReg.Height + oReg.Width + oReg.Left + oReg.Top` [Results of a survey of the surgeons of the region of Lorraine concerning the use of laparoscopic resection for cancer]. This study reports the results of a regional survey on the use of laparoscopic surgery for the resection of abdominal and pelvic tumours conducted in the region of Lorraine in 1992. The survey was addressed to all members of the association Groupe Interrégional de Chirurgie Générale, a group of surgeons practicing in the region of Lorraine. The answers were collected in anonymous form and the following criteria were studied: sex, age, number of years in practice, number of laparoscopic resections performed for cancer and type of surgery: partial gastrectomy, extended gastrectomy, segmentary liver resection, partial or extended colectomy, abdominal and pelvic tumours resections. Of 639 surgeons who responded to the survey, 310 answered. The number of laparoscopic resections performed for cancer varies widely from 0 to 15 per year and is not associated with the number of years in practice. The proportion of laparoscopic resections is associated with the number of laparoscopies performed for other abdominal and pelvic surgical procedures. Laparoscopic resection is most often used for abdominal and pelvic tumours.
