The ability of body mass index (BMI) to discriminate overweight from normal weight in children is well established. However, the definition of overweight based on BMI may not be appropriate for all children, especially those who are tall or short. The present study evaluates the correlation between BMI and body fatness, using the sum of skinfold thickness (SST) to calculate body fatness in a group of 5- to 12-year-old children. The accuracy and reproducibility of BMI for predicting excess body fatness were estimated in two independent reference groups of 30 children (15 normal weight, 15 overweight) aged 5-8 and 11-12 years. SST was measured by Harpenden skinfold calipers and BMI was calculated as the weight in kilograms divided by the square of the height in metres. Correlations between BMI and SST were
