SonicProxy [March-2022]

SonicProxy hides your real IP address, allows you to use different proxy servers and has a built-in search engine. Using SonicProxy is similar to using any other proxy server: set the proxy server and port and simply surf the web through the proxy server. SonicProxy then offers to make the process even easier by showing you the real IP of the last proxy server you used. It's pretty cool and everyone will need it at least once in his or her life. However, if you want to use a different proxy for a certain site, or you want to surf through a proxy when no one is looking, then you are out of luck. Fortunately, SonicProxy comes with a built-in search engine which lets you surf the web through various proxies without your real IP being exposed. By visiting a web site that supports the Yandex API, you can easily surf the web through different proxies with the click of a button. The most difficult thing to do is set the proxy IP and port, but there are no problems with that. SonicProxy comes with a graphical GUI, so it's pretty easy to set everything and start surfing the web. Unfortunately, SonicProxy is not a very user-friendly program, and it's hard to believe that it will become a popular application in the future. Some of the bugs that have been reported include: - When using a proxy through Yandex, the application doesn't automatically retry the connection. - Sometimes when restarting the application it disappears. - When setting the proxy server through the program, the port remains unchanged. - The program doesn't work with the IE browser or Chrome. - When opening the program the first time, an error message appears and nothing happens. - Sometimes when launching the program and the proxy is set, the program disappears a second after launch. However, most of the bugs have been fixed or can be ignored because they're not a big deal. All in all, SonicProxy is easy to use but a little bit complicated. It's also quite easy to set a proxy for a given site, but you can't set multiple proxies and surf the web anonymously. When surfing the web through Yandex, you will have the chance to add a custom DNS, but this feature is limited to three entries. For example, with Yandex it is impossible to enter custom DNS for Google, Facebook and Yahoo. Other than that, the search feature
