I checked the preferences for Aptana and all the plugins were showing up under the 'Available Plugins' list. I have verified with the Aptana Studio 3 web site that the plugins I was using are now supported and if I download the latest version of the installer everything works fine but the plug-ins still won't load. A: I checked the preferences for Aptana and all the plugins were showing up under the 'Available Plugins' list. I think the plugins directory is not a valid place for aptana.plugin files to be stored in your Aptana installation. Aptana only uses aptana.jar, aptana.cfg, and aptana.pysrc files to determine which plugins to load, and so the aptana.plugin files aren't going to affect this behavior. If you are using Aptana 3.1.1, you can load the plugins from the plugins directory by right-clicking the Projects window, selecting Properties, selecting 'Plug-ins', and clicking the 'Add Files...' button. Add the following file to the plugins directory: yourapp/plugin/my-plugin.py and then set this to the application executing it (the default is the application you're editing): yourapp/application/application.py
