What's New In?

I love the look and feel of Windows 7, and I love the capabilities of Visual Studio 2010. However, it's a nightmare to design UIs, do UI layouts, and even write UI code. To help make life easier for you, I'm starting to build out a collection of components and controls for you to use. This is a work in progress, so things will change and evolve. The first release in this series is TextBox Styler. It's a Visual Studio extension that allows you to quickly style your text boxes. Think of it as a visual style manager. To get started, go to Tools -> Extensions and Updates. In the search box, enter: textbox, and select "Search Installed

Extensions". The following Extensions are available for your to install: Read more about TextBox Styler here: This is my first attempt to actually create a UWP app. I will eventually get there. The app is super basic. It has a log in button that redirects to a page to load a list of names. It then has a table where you can add, edit or delete a name. You can also filter out specific names using a text box. I think I have it implemented correctly. Any and all criticism is welcome. Log In names.js
