Rinzo XML Editor is a free XML editor which lets you edit your XML files without the need of an external program. You have the power of a full featured XML editor within your web browser, with most of the power that comes with a standalone tool. Rinzo XML Editor provides a simple GUI and XML editor that supports all modern browsers like Firefox, Internet Explorer and Opera. You can also create your own custom tags, and you can even easily define the scope for these tags. Use the support of multiple views like Graphical Tree View, Nodes List View and Text View to navigate your XML data. You can also include documents with a 'body' tag for easy browsing and navigation. Rinzo XML Editor supports XPath expressions and XSLT stylesheets. You can even define custom XPath expressions. Use the XSLT style sheets to transform your documents into another format like HTML, Text or PDF. You can also view the schema for the document you are editing. Rinzo XML Editor also supports robots.txt. You can simply navigate through your XML data with the help of tags, and you can even navigate between groups of tags with the help of a tag tree. Rinzo XML Editor lets you open documents and view documents in the XML, HTML, Text, PDF and XML format. Desktop Sharing Description: Desktop sharing allows you to open a session on your computer, and view a session that is hosted on another computer. Desktop sharing allows you to view a session that is hosted on another computer from within a computer's local area network. To make your session available on another computer, the host computer needs to share the session with the other computer. The user viewing the session from another computer needs to have your computer's IP address in their browser's address bar. As an example, if you have a laptop at home and a desktop at work, you can share your laptop's screen with your desktop computer by opening your laptop's

Network Connections on your desktop computer. To start viewing a session, open the Network Connections icon on your desktop and select "Connect to Server." In the Server Name textbox, type the name of the computer hosting the session. You can also type a port number if the host is connected to a server on a port other than port 80. To connect to a host using a specific port, use the colon (:) followed by the port number. For example, if you wanted to connect to a host using port 2222, you would type the 1d6a3396d6

By using software called a VPN you can be sure of a 100% encrypted connection. This is great if you are concerned about the data travelling over the internet, whether it's browsing data, payment transactions or general communication. Using a VPN also gives you a whole host of benefits, such as having better connectivity on public wi-fi hotspots, safe browsing when on public computers, easy accessing of "restricted" websites and much more. And of course, you get to keep your personal data private. By using software called a VPN you can be sure of a 100% encrypted connection.
