Count Tabs For Firefox Free For Windows Latest

Count Tabs is a simple Firefox addon that gets integrated with Mozilla's browser to count all currently opened tabs and show their number in a tiny icon. It comes in handy to Firefox users who typically keep numerous tabs opened at all times for multitasking. Being constantly reminded by the number of pages you wish to handle simultaneously can help improve your productivity and focus on individual tasks by filtering tabs and closing the ones which aren't urgent. Simple Firefox addon that counts all opened tabs Count Tabs gets installed effortlessly. It works with the newest Firefox editions, only requires to access browser tabs, and requires no configuration. In fact, it doesn't have an options panel that can be visited to review settings, which is the case of other browser addons. Once enabled, the extension shows a blue icon next to the menu, which reveals the number of all opened tabs. Even pinned tabs are taken into account. The tool continuously checks the sum of tabs, so any modifications are immediately reflected in its icon. Only the tabs available in the current Firefox window are counted, which means that, if you have multiple instances running, each with a different number of tabs, then the app counts them separately (by instance). No configuration necessary We tried stressing it out by opening numerous tabs (over 200) in our tests but Count Tabs behaved normally. No errors occurred because of this. Although the project is rather simplistic, it's practical for some users. Count Tabs is free and open source, released under the Mozilla Public License, which means that you can review the code on the developer's website, modify it and further implement it into your own development projects. Follow these steps to get started: Click the button below to add the add-on to the Firefox toolbar. To avoid the hassle, click the button and choose "Add to Firefox". Alternatively, you can choose "Add to Firefox Account", and then install the add-on to your account. This works even without browser restart, but requires your Firefox installation to be installed in a browser-specific folder, called "Profile" in Windows and "Application Data" in Mac OS X, otherwise it won't work. Open Firefox and access the menu. There should be a button labeled "Menu". You can also try to "Search for in Firefox", if you did not find the button there. Restart the Firefox browser and check out the Count Tabs icon. It's usually in the bottom left corner, next to the menu button. Three other boats have also been impounded by the Libyan coastguard since Saturday in the same area of the Gulf of Sirte. According to the International Organization for Migration (IOM), only two of the 116 refugees and migrants that were on board the boat that sank earlier this week survived the ordeal. "They had rescued another 110 people from the same boat
