The example described is a game that teaches people to set up and maintain their own website. The game simulates a business environment in which users can see whether they have enough money or visitors by using each screen. The information conveyed is the following: ⯀ Money requirement: determine whether to continue or not depending on the time required, the difficulty of setting up the website and the number of people who visit the website. ⯀ People requirement: determine whether to continue or not depending on the time required to complete the task and the number of visitors. ⯀ Settings requirement: determine whether to continue or not depending on the difficulty of setting up the website. Definitely, when you see the gamers, there is a link to put your mind in operation! [1] The paper is available on the Google Academy website. It is titled "From game to learning: Understanding what makes for a game-oriented learning task".
