I'm changing my Sharepoint site so that I don't have to upload files to the website. Now I have a sub-domain that points to an account I use for my local copy of the Sharepoint website.

When I want to go back to my development server, I can just load my development website. I just don't have a copy of the Sharepoint website that I can download and refer to when I'm building Sharepoint projects. Is there a way that I can download a copy of my Sharepoint website that would work locally? A: Yes, that's called the offline web site. There are a few articles around on how to do this. You may find the following useful. A multicountry comparison of different women's and children's educational programs for HIV prevention. This paper presents an overview of women's and children's educational programs for HIV prevention in four countries (Uganda, Ethiopia, Botswana and India) using a standard checklist in order to generate a profile of the key components of programs, and their changes over time. The heterogeneity and similarity of the interventions is described, and the implications for HIV prevention programming are discussed. Findings from the four countries illustrate that women's and children's educational programming for HIV prevention is present in all four countries. However, given the fact that many of the program materials are locally adapted, it is
