Why is the third return call yielding a different result than first return? Any insight into this would be appreciated. A: If you want the result of the first iteration, then you need to return it, before you even get to the iteration. `public static int firstIteration() { int x = 1; try { do { int y = 1; System.out.println(y); Thread.sleep(1); } while (x == 1); System.out.println("iteration 2"); return y; } catch (InterruptedException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } }` then this outputs 1 iteration 2 as expected. 'use strict'; // Each token may have only one ancestor element, except for cases // where white space is allowed. var ARRAY_NODES = webkitNamespace + ':root { |nodelist| n.nodelist; }'; var CSS_NS = webkitNamespace + ':root { |nodelist| n.namespace; }'; function createCSS(elem, node) { if (node.selector && node.selector.indexOf(CSS_NS) >= 0) { return elem; } else { var style = elem.getAttribute('style'); style = !style && elem.ownerDocument.defaultView.getComputedStyle(elem, null); return style? [style, elem] : []; } } function normalizeNodes(nodes) { return nodes? [nodes[0]]
