Green Party today called on the B.C. government to cancel all outstanding fossil fuel resource permits and require landowners with permits to provide compensation to those displaced by the new development. Green Party leader Andrew Weaver also pledged the party would review all current approval for fossil fuel development in the province, including First Nations' rights and title, as well as the British Columbia Assessment Act. "The B.C. government must finally get out of the way of people in need. We cannot allow the continuing expansion of fossil fuel development to remain unchecked," Weaver said. "For too long, the province has failed to protect the rights of Indigenous people and their traditional territories. This must end." Weaver also said: The B.C. government must not allow the expansion of the outdated and out-of-date North and South of Burrard
