The Anastomosis of Cystic Tumors of the Kidney. The treatment of renal cystic tumors has become increasingly conservative over the past several decades. As the risk of malignancy has fallen, the indications for nephrectomy have been reduced to those in which total excision is required to achieve a definitive diagnosis. This means that removal of the cyst is the only treatment in view of the benign nature of these neoplasms. The authors of this study describe the role of nephrectomy with cyst excision in the treatment of solid cystic or multilocular cystic tumors. Results indicate that it is a highly effective and safe treatment option with low morbidity, mortality, and recurrence rates.

GM-CAN The GM-CAN is a standard RS232 communication protocol developed for communicating with alarm and monitoring systems as a standalone device. It was introduced in 1989. It is implemented in numerous alarm and security products.

Gemel is produced by Bosch under license from the NIST (National Institute of Standards and Technology) of the U.S.A. M-CAN is a registered trademark of Gemel, Inc. Function GM-CAN is used to communicate with alarm and monitoring systems using an RS232 serial line. The communication from the Gemel system to the alarm system can be either polling or streaming. • GM-CAN is always used with Gemel.NET middleware to provide real-time reporting of alarm and monitoring events. GM-CAN systems are used in environments where the ability to receive alarm events and receive streaming data is important, for example: Automotive Construction Security Light Industrial • GM-CAN system standards GM-CAN is a standard developed by Gemel, Inc. for communications between alarm and monitoring systems that use RS232 as their serial communication medium. The standard provides a way to program the system with logical communications commands that can be used to read/write event records, switch output communications channels, and configure and control the alarm system. The signals that are typically provided for communication with the alarm and monitoring systems are; Gemel Standard GM-CAN programming instructions GM-CAN programming instructions provide the GM-CAN commands that can be used to program the alarm and monitoring system for the Gemel standard. The GM-CAN commands are listed below. The first five commands are for configuration and monitoring of the alarm system, and the final five commands are for switching communications with the alarm system. These commands are used to read and write records and return them in a serial format on the RS232 line. Application Programming instructions for the Gemel System are provided for each software that is available from Gemel, Inc. GM-CAN use and protocols GM-CAN is used to connect to alarm and monitoring systems which use RS232 as their serial communication medium. The alarm and monitoring systems can use GM-CAN as a standalone device to be used in environments where the ability to receive alarm events and receive streaming data is important. The alarm systems can also connect to GM-CAN systems through the Gemel.NET middleware and communicate 648931e174

This is a critical point in terms of patient outcome, because both the quality and the duration of the QOL improvement should be stable at long-term.

Among the patients of our series, 30 (74.31%) had simple anal fistulae, which consisted mainly of the intersphincteric fistula (92.85%). Among the patients with anal fistulae, mean FIS was 14.7. According to the FIS, our study population was divided into two groups: patients with a FIS of ≤ 15 were categorized into group 1, and patients with a FIS of > 15 were categorized into group 2. The complication rate was higher in the group of patients with a FIS of > 15 (67.64% vs. 37.5%, p Huang's "(Excerpt)" Thursday, December 10, at 8:00pm (check the calendar to make sure it's not during lunch) Tickets are $15 and $25 Rattlestick Theatre is pleased to present a ticketed concert by exciting and controversial folk musician J. C. Huang, performing new songs from his first full-length album, "New American Folk." This album was recently released on Bomp! Records and is described by the DJ at WFMU as "One of the most compelling, beautiful and energized records I've heard in awhile." His first New York City performance in 18 months will be at Rattlestick. J. C. Huang is a new-generation folk performer. He's funny, he's punk, he's fiery, and he's very good at his craft. The distinctive sounds and rich arrangements of New American Folk are indicative of the diversity and creative reinvention of music in the new century. The album is a snapshot of the music the new century will be made of. There's folk-rock, folk-punk, folk-pop, folk-jazz, and, yes, folk-metal. Huang effortlessly melds these styles, creating a sound and musical experience unlike anything you've heard before. Since releasing New American Folk, Huang has performed throughout the US, UK, and Europe. He has performed at showcases at South by Southwest, CMJ, and countless smaller festivals, including the Music and Literature Festival of The New School, the Upright Citizens Brigade Theater, and Mark's Arts & Music Series. He has toured with Robert Glasper, New Grass Revival, and special guest Nils Frykdahl. He performed at the Kennedy Center Honors in Washington, DC. A participant on the inaugural season of "The Dirtball Opera" in Edinburgh, J. C. Huang is a founding member of the Post-Modern American Music
