Although alcohol is clearly a risk factor for many cancers, the association with hormone-related cancers has not been well established. This study assesses the risk of hormone-related cancers in relation to alcohol consumption. Cases and controls were drawn from the European Prospective Investigation into Cancer and Nutrition (EPIC) study, and were frequency-matched for study center and sex. Information on alcohol consumption was collected in a similar manner throughout the study, with intake expressed as grams of alcohol per day. Alcohol consumption was converted into units of alcohol per day, with a corresponding ethanol content of 21 grams per unit. The odds ratios (ORs) for hormone-related cancers in relation to alcohol consumption were evaluated using conditional logistic regression. The analysis was adjusted for confounding factors, in particular tobacco smoking. In the analysis of 13,310 cases and 58,650 controls, the overall OR for all cancers in relation to alcohol was 1.12 (95%

Cote, 30, of Montreal, pleaded guilty to attempted theft under $5,000, which carries a fine of up to $5,000 in Canada. She was sentenced by provincial court judge Marc-André Charbonneau to 10 days in jail, which will be served in two-month intervals. Cote had been working at The Tilted Pelican when she was caught on surveillance video on the night of Nov. 1, 2008, throwing chunks of chicken nuggets into the garbage and rinsing dishes in beer and other liquids, reported The Canadian Press. "Your actions not only disgusted your customers, but also the restaurant employees who were forced to clean up your mess," Judge Charbonneau told Cote. "You may well have believed that you were doing a job that many other people would pay a lot of money to be able to do." Cote had worked for the restaurant for about five months but was fired after the incident, a lawyer for the restaurant told The Canadian Press.

Quantification of platelet dysfunction in a fixed collection tube with citrated plasma. This study was performed to determine whether citrated plasma can be used to quantify the quantitative platelet aggregation response in a fixed collection tube with a standard coagulation scale, and to compare the results in the fixed collection tube with those obtained in the heparinized collection tube. Platelet aggregometry and computerized light transmission aggregometry were performed with citrated plasma, heparinized plasma, and platelet-rich plasma. Sodium citrate-anticoagulated blood (n = 30) was used to evaluate the degree of platelet aggregation in the fixed collection tube.
