The program comes in two versions: the standalone version for the Mac and Windows operating systems, and the more expansive Creative Cloud version for the Mac and Windows operating systems. Both versions include many of the same features, and Adobe provides a way to keep your files (and your Adobe Suite) in sync between the two versions. To do so, you'll need to buy a Creative Cloud membership, which costs about $50 annually. Figure 3-2: The buttons and tools at the top of the Photoshop window, like the buttons on a typical tool bar. Photoshop uses the following common terms: Layers: A layer is basically a copy of an image. You layer an image over another, move the layer, or create a New Layer from an existing one. From now on in this book, when I talk about layers, I specifically mean layer. Frame: The frame is the image's outer edge or border. Border: The border is the area that you can see outside the frame. The border contains options you can apply to the frame. Layer mask: The layer mask, or the Layer Mask, makes changes to a specific portion of a layer or multiple layers. It's always best to use the layer mask to create a clone stamp and then use the clone stamp for fine-tuning. When you turn a layer mask off, you turn off the visibility of that part of the layer. Adjustment layer: A layer that contains an adjustment. You use these layers to make adjustments in your image. An option: Options are settings that are specific to a feature. A feature: A feature is part of a specific tool or button on the palette, which creates a specific kind of effect. Brush: A brush is the tool you use to create specific effects. What is Photoshop Elements? Photoshop Elements is designed for people who want to quickly edit photos or create new images without using or learning Photoshop. It is a simplified version of the professional version of Adobe Photoshop. It features a variety of editing tools, from adjustment layers, to straightening tools and more. Adobe Photoshop Elements is available for purchase online, or as part of a software bundle that includes Adobe Photoshop CS6 Extended. Images usually take hundreds of megabytes in size. Because of this, it is a good idea to keep images that you don't need to store. Create an external drive or extra hard drive to store images on. Depending on the quality of the image, it may take a while to load. Photoshop Elements is also slow to start up. This program is geared towards people who are not very experienced in graphics editing. As a beginner, Photoshop Elements is one of the best programs you can use for editing photos and creating graphics. Can you Use Photoshop Elements to Design Websites? Yes you can use Photoshop Elements as a website design program. Photoshop Elements features tools to adjust the color, brightness, contrast, and other aspects of photos that will look great on the web. Like all programs, Photoshop Elements features a color picker, perspective, and cropping tools to cut out parts of the image. Some people use Photoshop Elements to create small graphics such as headers or banners. Use Photoshop Elements to Edit Images Photoshop Elements includes an image adjustment tool. It allows you to adjust the contrast, color, brightness, and perspective of the image. This tool works much like the PhotoShop tool, and it also provides many settings for other parameters like saturation, exposure, and highlights and shadows. These adjustments improve the color, brightness, and contrast of the image. You can also change the size, rotation and position of the image or crop the image into a smaller version. You can also do some basic image processing like sharpening and desharpening. It also comes with resizing tools like the Crop tool and the Rectangular Selection tool. Other basic tools include the Reflection Removal tool, a Marquee tool, and the Colour replacement tool. Adobe Photoshop Elements is designed specifically to edit photos, so it includes other tools that people use to take photos. The Resize tool allows you to resize an image. You can pick from a variety of 388ed7b0c7

Alexander Ovechkin must have been having a fun time this week. Moments before Tuesday's ceremony honoring Wayne Gretzky, Ovechkin had tweeted out an image of the "Great One" which he photoshopped to have the former NHL legend's face on his jersey. The 31-year-old Russian had some fun with the image, but then made it clear that "No fun" was not a part of the ceremony. Gretzky walked away with the Hart Trophy on Tuesday night, winning his second of eight career awards. Wayne also won the Maurice "Rocket" Richard Trophy, given to the player with the most goals during the regular season. The former Edmonton Oilers superstar led the League in scoring during the 2011-12 campaign with 98 points, seven ahead of Claude Giroux of the Philadelphia Flyers. Gretzky finished with a point in all 82 regular season games for the third consecutive season as well. Like this: [youtube The Ducks on Monday traded a conditional first-round pick to the Flyers for Troy Brouwer, a 25-year-old forward who has spent the past four seasons in Anaheim. Brouwer is owed $1.25 million this year and has a $1.65 million cap hit. Brouwer has 566 points in 622 regular season games, all with the Ducks, since he was selected by the team in the fourth round of the 2005 NHL Draft. He was also a member of the Ducks' 2007 Stanley Cup championship team. If Brouwer reaches certain on-ice or game stats in the 2010-11 NHL season, the Ducks will receive a first-round pick in the 2011 NHL Draft. However, Brouwer will be traded by the end of the Ducks' 2010-11 season if he doesn't reach these benchmarks. "It's a matter of on-ice accomplishments and game-time performance for us," Ducks head coach Randy Carlyle told reporters in Calgary. "We will look at that and make a fair decision." Like this: "No fun." That was Wayne Gretzky's response when asked what he thought of the Hart Trophy ceremony when it was announced that his

Hospitalist physicians are estimated to spend about as much time on ancillary services and administration as they do with patient care, according to a new study. The study surveyed 100 physicians and 100 ancillary staff members at 16 US hospitals and found that ancillary staff work an average of 4.2 hours a day, give or take 1.1. Members of the ancillary staff are responsible for booking patient rooms, performing paperwork, updating information on hospital electronic medical records (EMRs), and performing nursing duties, among other activities. The study, which was published in the Journal of Hospital Medicine and examined data from the 2003 to 2013 period, found that the most time spent by ancillary staff members was on administration. For example, nurses' aides spent an average of 9.9 hours a day on administrative tasks, including travel to and from the hospital. Paying for labor costs The study's findings add to the expanding debate about how much hospitalists are spending on labor costs. Hospitalists have long been accused of outsourcing patient care and keeping labor costs down by billing patients for nurse tasks that they may have performed themselves. Some hospitals have brought in independent contractor nurses to perform lab work and other duties that hospital staff have traditionally performed on their own, or they have introduced house call teams that bill patients for their service. The costs of those two types of services are a matter of intense debate among hospital leaders. Because such services are billed directly to patients, they are not available as a line-item for hospital administrators to scrutinize. As hospital costs rise, hospital leaders are looking at hospitalists as a way to lower labor costs and to pay for new technologies. So far, however, hospitalists have been a relatively inexpensive way to fill the gaps in time that hospitalists spend on paperwork and administration. Spending more time on patient care Hospitalists currently provide care to only about a quarter of their patients, the study found. That means they only spend a little more than 3 hours a day caring for patients. For purposes of comparison, a group of physician extenders spent an average of four hours a day performing administrative tasks and another group spent five hours a day performing patient care. The researchers, from the University of Pittsburgh and Western University, noted that billing for ancillary staff members such as nurses' aides or house call teams tends to decrease when they are employed by a hospital. The researchers note that
