This connection is made using wires that are either soldered, connected by adhesive, or connectable by other well known connecting means. Generally, there are four basic types of circuits: (1) analog circuits, (2) digital circuits, (3) hybrid analog/digital circuits, and (4) hybrid digital/analog circuits. The first two types are considered to be "digital" circuits, even though the complete circuit is controlled by the function being performed in order to control the turning on and off of individual devices, such as transistors. Thus, generally, the term "digital circuit" is understood to cover both digital circuits and analog circuits. Therefore, the present invention is directed to a hybrid analog/digital circuit. Different digital circuits may provide different functionality

Cells of the peritoneal exudate were analysed for their ability to lyse tumour cells. Peritoneal cells from normal and tumour bearing mice were cultured in vitro for 24 hours and cytotoxicity of cells against tumour cells was analysed. The three-fold rise in lysing activity of the exudate cells against tumour cells was found to be due to an increase in the tumouricidal activity of MOPC-21. However, a selectivity to tumour cells was observed with the exudate cells from BALB/c bearing P815 tumour cells as compared to normal cells. Intraperitoneal administration of the immunomodulator 3,6-diethyl-8-(2-hydroxy)octylthioxanthene (DMOTH) was found to induce a similar tumouricidal activity in peritoneal exudate cells as that obtained from normal mice. However, there was a three-fold rise in cytotoxicity of the exudate cells from the tumour bearing mice as compared to the cytotoxicity obtained from cells of normal mice. These studies confirmed the selectivity in inducing tumouricidal activity of the exud b7e8fdf5c8
