FILE PHOTO: Chilean and Brazilian flags are seen before a meeting at the Brasilia international airport in Brasilia, Brazil, September 20, 2017. REUTERS/Ueslei Marcelino/File Photo Chile, which has a northern border with Peru in which armed violence and in some areas drug dealing takes place, is the only Latin American nation that Brazil hopes to make a deal with. Brazil's economy minister Paulo Guedes, asked during an interview with Reuters whether his government was going to investigate "cartels" if negotiations with Chile are successful, said there is a "big difference" between the two. "Not everything is (a) declaration that you are the best.

Trade is a healthy thing,” he said, adding that the issue was to “bring the state in” if “cartels” are involved. He also said that, in his view, Colombia, currently among Latin America’s most violent countries, was “isolated” and the only other country in Latin America to be “going through a process of transformation.” The minister said Brazil was now “certainly” going to negotiate a trade deal with Chile, which has a population of about 15 million and a gross domestic product of 1.46 trillion reais ($382 billion). However, he said Brazil’s starting position would be that Chile would comply with trade rules in exchange for Brazil’s helping with the region’s economic crisis, saying “that’s the right way to work.” Chile has just emerged from a two-year recession d0c515b9f4
